

Something for everyone...

Aerosol & Dispensing Forum to host workshop, lectures, awards and more...

The 6th edition of the Aerosol Forum, now called the Paris Aerosol & Dispensing Forum, will be held Feb. 8–9, 2012 at a new venue, the Espace Champerret, Porte de Champerret in Paris, France.

Over 1,000 participants from 40 countries representing leading international brands in the pharmaceutical, cosmetics, household products & decoration, industrial and food sectors will have the opportunity to meet suppliers in the fields of aerosols, dispensing technologies, cans, valves, spray systems, bags-on-valve, technology and equipment. The number of exhibitors has grown approximately 15% from 2011.

The Forum will enable brand and packaging experts to take stock of current and future innovations in a large number of sectors such as hygiene, beauty, pharmaceuticals, food, decoration, DIY, paint, gardening, household goods, industrial products and automotive.

Nathalie Thys, GlaxoSmithKline, will chair “Dispensing Technologies,” a session on the advantages of dispensing technologies for health products and drugs, including understanding and identifying extractables in packaging materials, good practices in screening for extractables and leachables in orally inhaled and nasal drugs, new trends and solutions in nasal spray, dispensing technologies in terms of design, use and security and the latest news in antimicrobial preservatives.

Chaired by Jay Gouliard, VP Global Strategy, Avery Dennison, the “Sound Signature of Spray” session will address airless technologies from legislation to practice, dry shampoos, aerosol manufacturing technologies and sustainable development, quality control and the potential of sleeve technology for decoration.

A session on recent advances in aerosol development will be chaired by Eric Scheid, Purchasing Director, Danone. Subjects covered concern migration from plastic packaging, powder coatings for aerosol cans and tubes, niche and technical applications for the future of aerosols, recent advances and prospects for triggers and bridging the gap between aerosols and trigger sprays.

The Paris Aerosol & Dispensing Awards Ceremony will reward innovations and new applications for aerosols and dispensing systems, emphasizing the work carried out by packaging teams in design, consumer ease-of-use, safety and respect for the environment.

The second edition of “Paris Aerosol Restaurant” will give experts an opportunity to discuss the food products currently marketed or in advanced stages of development. Participants will be able to taste aerosol products such as sauces, foams, spices and culinary decorations prepared by the Coltiviva-Polenghi teams.

The Innovation Workshop, chaired by Michel Fontaine, President of National Packaging Council, will encompass three themes: Electronic Spray Formation Systems, Airless Systems and Triggers.

Registration information, as well as the complete exhibition and conference program, is available at www.aerosol-forum.com. A Forum badge permits access to the Perfumes, Cosmetics & Design conference held simultaneously.
